Letter from Fauquier.

MARSHALL, May 23 .- The march of improvement is visible on every hand, especially in the direction of our new depot. Mr. Maddux, proprietor of the Warren Green Hotel, Judge Meade, of Alexandria, and several enterprising citizens from the Shenandoah Valley have purchased desirable lots and houses. Strangers and visitors from the cities already have begun to arrive that they may enjoy a sojourn in as lovely a section of country as can be seen in Vir-Fine horses and handsome equipages abound on our public highways, and several wealthy Northerners have settled in our midst. It is reported a large remunerative price has been offered to Mr. Lawrence Washington by one of this class for "Wave-land," the superb property owned by Mr. Washington.

The delegates to the Episcopal Council have returned, greatly pleased with the welcome accorded to them by the hospitable citizens of Alexandria. This week the election of local officials, viz: Clerk of the County Court, Treasurer and Sheriff, will occur. There is considerable stir just now among the "wets" and "drys" for or against bar-rooms in Marthal Delities approach is igned with shall. Petitions numerously signed will be presented to the court. Like the Chinamen's opium the love for the weed and John Barleycorn have long held sway in this latitude. Indeed, only a divine power can, we believe, take away from mankind their desire for whiskey. The politicians have discovered money and revenue by the traffic and the year.

ey and revenue by the traffic, and the peo-ple will have it so. The great John C. Cal-houn declared "the Constitution was violated to raise revenue as the instrument of rearing up the industry of one section on the ruins of another," but, the revenue on iquor destroys soul and body of thousands of our citizens Affairs will not improve in Virginia, it is thought here, now that the settlement of the debt question has failed, and already repudiation is talked about. The democracy must take a back seat in the near future. Our entire community mourns the loss of Fauquier's and Virginia's most distinguished citizen, ex Gov. Wm. Smith. He was universally respected and honored by all classes. The writer recalls an early recollection of his memorable political contest for Congres-sional honors with the then eminent editor of the GAZETTE, the late Edgar Snowden; wit, logic and argument were the weapons wielded, and the two met as Greek met Greek. We shall all miss sadly the old man elequent, and especially Warrentonians, among whom the old Governor resided from the time that he studied law in the office of the late Thomas L. Moore until he died.

A Lover's Prize Fight.

"Requiescal in Pace."

Robert Frisch is clerk in a hardware establishment in Milwaukee, David Levy occupied a similar post in a furniture store. Both have been endeavoring to secure a monopoly of the affections of a North Side young lady, who is quite a belle in German society circles. Naturally, this rivalry engendered a feeling of bitterness, which continued to grow until both suitors agreed that one or the other must withdraw. It was decided to leave the matter to the arbitrament of a ring contest, Marquis of Queensberry rules, the successful man to take the gate receipts and the young lady. Accordingly, on Wednesday evening Frisch and Levy, with their seconds and a few friends, met in a small hall in the town of Milwaukee. William Sullivan, the champion horseshoer, was se-lected as referee, and the contestants stripped for one of the most novel contests ever witnessed in the city, novel both in its cause and the work of the contestants. Neither had the slightest knowledge of the technicalities of the manly art. Frisch was tall and lean, weighing one hundred and forty pounds; Levy was short and stout, weighing one hundred and sixty pounds. When time was called, they went at each other with much good will be went at each other with much good will, but little science. For the first four rounds Levy seemed to have the fight all his own way-rushed at his antagonist like a mad bull, as though he would demolish him in a few rounds. Frisch, however, pluckily took his punishment, and promptly responded to the call of time each succeeding round. Levy's work began to tell on his wind in the sixth round, and two or three sharp blows served to hasten the work of demoralization. The next round Frisch began to get in with his right hand, countering heavily on Levy's ribs. The eighth and last round was a rep-etition of the seventh. When time was called Levy staggered over to his seat, and as he dropped into the chair announced, "I won't fight any more." The jeers and laughter of the crowd had no effect. He broke from his second and began to dress. Under the agreement Frisch took the few dol-
